

FCC should rule to protect Free Public, Educational and Governmental Access (PEG Access) no matter what technology is used to deliver television now and in the future. This will protect localism and democracy in America.

The current law has an anomaly in that it just grants PEG Access to Cable subscribers. The law should also be extended to subscribers of satellite, digital and all other vehicles of communication for universal coverage.